SAYS VOWS IN ST. MARYS CHURCH

Miss Jean Marie Rueckert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dean E. Rueckert of Mokena, and Mr. William Rodeghero, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Rodeghero of Lockport were united in marriage Saturday afternoon August 17 at 2:30 o'clock in St. Mary's Catholic church in Mokena, with Father Benedict officiating, using the double ring ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white tailored street length dress with a yellow daisy headband and carried a bouquet of yellow daisies and daffodils.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Diemer of Lockport, sister and brother-in-law of the groom were the attendants. Mrs. Diemer wore a figured jersey dress with a headband identical to that of the bride's, and carried yellow daisies. American beauty roses and daffodils.

The groom, best man and fathers of the couple, each wore a white aster boutonniere.

The church was prettily decorated with baskets of garden flowers.

The bride's mother chose a black crepe dress with rose accessories for her daughter's wedding. The groom's mother was attired in aqua blue crepe with black accessories. Both wore a white gladioli corsage.

Following the service, a wedding dinner was served in the home of the bride's parents to the immediate family members and a few close friends.

A wedding reception was held in the evening at Hatch hall which was attended by 150 guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Rodeghero are spending a week's honeymoon at Lake Geneva, Wis. Upon their return, they will take up housekeeping in a three room furnished apartment on Raynor Avenue in Joliet.

Small Child Hit By Passing Motorist

Mark, 2½ year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Muehler who live at the corner of Wolf Road and Front street in Mokena, was hit by a car Tuesday evening about 5 o'clock when he ran into the street in front of his home.

Mark had evidently just ran into Front street and was returning when Mr. Armstrong of Mokena was driving west on Front street to turn onto Wolf Road and did not see the little boy. He stopped as soon as he hit him, and took the little boy with his mother to the office of Dr. E. G. McMahon in Mokena.

Mark fell when hit, on loose gravel, which scratched his face and nose quite badly. He was thrown on his hip which was bruised also. No bones are broken as can be noticed as yet. X-rays will be taken when the swelling has gone down.

Birds By The Bushels

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Patterson who live on the Lincoln Highway, just east of route 45, have been all summer trying in some way to figure out a way in which they might get rid of the nuisance of birds in their trees.

The birds were sparrows, and were in countless numbers.

A way was at last found last Friday evening, a way they least thought of. When they arose Saturday morning after the severe storm during Friday night they were very surprised to see the ground beneath the large old ash tree covered with dead sparrows.

The members of the family started to pick up the dead birds, using bushel baskets, and counted them as they carried them away. When they reached 500 they stopped counting, with still many more to pick up.

The birds were all young, able to just fly, but not able to cling to the tree branches during a heavy wind and rain storm. Those which were not dead from the fall drowned in the water beneath the tree. Could we say, this was one way nature compensated?

FAMILY REUNION BIG SUCCESS

The Bettenhausen family reunion, held last Sunday went over with a "bang." There were approximately 35 in attendance. At noon a covered dish dinner was served after which a business meeting took place, Emil Woodman presiding.

The arrangements for the day were taken care of by the committee in charge, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Woodman, Mr. Arran Deist and Mrs. Faye Siemson and was very well handled.

Officers elected for the coming year are: Wm. Bettenhausen, Pres., Faye Siemson, Sec. and Treas. Mr. Woodman gave a very inspirational talk on how this family group could be a strength for food for this community, also to adhere to the American way of living, by following in the footsteps of their forefathers.

Wm. Bettenhausen told how he had come across the name Bettenhausen while in the European service, which undoubtedly belonged to this group, since it was in the immediate neighborhood from where the Grandfather came.

Mrs. Ruth Jochum and Mrs. Lydia Andres had charge of the games for the children while Wm. Bettenhausen and Mrs. Siemson took care of the older group. Group pictures were taken.

Prizes were awarded to the winners. The oldest person present was Frank J. Kohlman, the youngest being Michael Smith, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Smith of Orland. Thieves Enter Farm Home While Family Was Away

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Heatherwick who are tenants in the former Mrs. John Stellwagon's home on 179th and 108 Ave. were most surprised Sunday to find thieves had entered their home while they were away Sunday afternoon.

They left early in the afternoon to visit relatives in Orland Park, and returned about 9:30 and noticed their front door standing open and the front bedroom window blind up sideways. They had to jimmy the rear door to enter their home and then saw the upheaval left by some unwelcome guests.

The thieves had gained entrance by removing the screen on the bedroom window and jimmying it open. The cedar chest was opened and much of its contents taken.

Other articles taken were: radios, electric fan, and many more, amounting to about $1,000.

Mr. Heatherwick would like to contact anyone who drove by his house Sunday afternoon about 6 o'clock when the thievery took place, and ascertain if they noticed a car in the driveway or pulling away from there.

Prairie Farmer Detective Service advises any farmer, whether they are insured with them or not, in cases such as the above, to notify them at once.

It is expected that many of such thieving will take place this winter.

LIGHT TURNOUT EXPECTED AT POLLS TOMORROW

New Lenox holds its first election for village officers Saturday, August 24th after an unusually quiet campaign. The absence of outward fanfare however, does not indicate the slightest disinterest in the election. There is plenty of talk to be heard regarding candidates, yet in all likelihood there will only be a light turnout at the polls because there are no big issues involved.

The term of the new board will be only until the regular village election next April. Nevertheless, in that short period of 7 months much may be accomplished and the efficiency of the organization will go a long ways in determining whether the same group will be reelected or replaced.

The form of government was provided for by the state law. It is used in most villages throughout Illinois. It consists of a President (commonly called Mayor); 6 trustees elected at large (commonly called aldermen); and a clerk. The treasurer is not elected by the voters but appointed by the board. A form of government may be changed at any time by referendum vote. However, unless one can show the Commissioner or Manager form is much better and feasible for New Lenox, the new board will lose little time on the question. The big job before the officers will be setting up an organization for carrying out the various functions of government.

Voting will begin Saturday, August 24 at 6 am. at Otto's Cities Service Station. Shortly after the closing of the polls at 5 pm. the new President will probably announce the 1st meeting of the new officers. At this meeting the men elected will be sworn into office and the new government will be officially underway.

IT'S SAME CROWD AGAIN

PARIS. — It's hot in the galleries of the palace of Luxembourg. In the top gallery sit hundreds of newsmen — Chinese, Siamese, Greek, Indian, New Zealanders, watching a man speak far below. Newsmen from all over the world watching the peace. It's their peace. What's done here will affect their countries from Baluchistan to Iceland, from Saskatchewan to Samoa, and they are watching.

Far below, under the klieg lights, sits Jimmy Byrnes — patient, polite Jimmy Byrnes — never leaving his seat, never failing to listen. . . . A man speaks into the microphone. He's interpreting Molotov . . . in French. Another man speaks. He's interpreting Molotov in English. . . . It takes hours. When, you wonder, will diplomacy ever become modernized? Diplomacy hasn't been changed since 1815. . . . The Vienna conference when the great powers divided up Europe and brought on more wars.

Paris today is depressingly the same. We invent modern methods of warfare. . . . Rockets that may reach the moon, atomic bombs that sink navies, germs that can destroy civilizations. . . . But the weapons of peace never keep pace with the weapons of war. . . . nor do the diplomats who wield the weapons of peace.

The same crowd which failed to head off the last war is here again — even some of the same crowd which sat in at the last Paris peace conference. . . . Look at their faces. Poker faces. No life, no lift, no passion for the peace they are negotiating, bored faces, preoccupied faces, bored with the endless translations. Bored with the whole boredom of diplomacy. Not a man among them who lost an arm or a leg, who knows what it is to suffer on the battlefield. These are the men who are writing the peace.

Jimmy Byrnes is not bored. Polite, patient, precise Jimmy Byrnes sits on the front row — perhaps he is too polite, too patient. . . . You feel like shouting down at Jimmy. You wish you had a telephone to reach him there, way down below. You wish you could tell him:

"That was a great speech you made the other day, Jimmy, but finish it. Tell them the rest of the story. Tell them not only that the United States isn't going to remain isolated but also that we're going to raise hell with anyone who blocks our path to peace. Tell them that millions of Americans are fed up with all this frittering; that millions of Americans mean business and will back you up in anything you do."

Around the senate chamber of the palace of Luxembourg are great, gold ornaments. Woodwork carved in ornate shapes, heavily encrusted with gold—remnants of the lush days of the de Medicis. . . . If the French had only been smart. If they had only painted out the gold and substituted white crosses! Then perhaps the bored diplomats sitting below would remember. . . . white crosses . . . from Guadalcanal and Stalingrad, from Salerno and New Guinea, from Tobruk and the Rapido, from Normandy and Aachen. . . . Close your eyes and you can see them. . . . Thousands of white crosses. . . . The dead speak:

"To all your praises we are deaf and blind.

"We may not even know if you betray

"The hopes we cherished for mankind."

But the diplomats below don't seem to hear. . . . Men in red plush seats, fastidious men in red plush seats, their nails polished, their cravats carefully tied. They don't seem to hear. They are thinking about procedure and majority votes, vetoes and prestige and whether they will get out in time to take tea with Mrs. Ogden Mills.

One man does hear. He sits opposite Jimmie Byrnes. . . . A big, uncouth man, his hair not even parted. . . . Evatt of Australia. His cockney accent is uncultured but he dares to speak. He is the only man who comes anywhere near preaching the Sermon on the Mount, who tells the bored men in the red plush seats that they must love their neighbors as themselves. . . . Unpleasantly Evatt steps on the toes of the big nations — tells them they have no business sabotaging the peaceful goal of others. . . . They don't like Evatt, but they listen. Even patient, polite Jimmie Byrnes doesn't like Evatt. But he listens. . . . Thousands of men under white crosses listen, too.

BARTERING OVER PEACE

Clement Attlee, prime minister of Britain, speaks — the man who performed the miracle of defeating War Leader Winston Churchill — a modest man, a sincere, earnest man. His bald head shines under the klieg lights. But it is no halo. . . . Some hours before Attlee was haggling with Byrnes over the future of Germany — bartering over the peace of the world; wanting to trade off a British policy in Palestine for an American policy in Germany.

SO FAR 1946 has been an amazing season in two ways—for its brilliancy and its failures. For its Mexico—and the good that Mexico has done for ball players everywhere.

Ted Williams

The Red Sox, Joe Louis and Assault have taken full charge of the spotlight side. They have been the outstanding champions. Golf has no entry with Ben Hogan and Byron Nelson, the two leading money winners, trailing Lloyd Mangrum in the U. S. Open. We seem to have the best tennis players but a Frenchman is still the Wimbledon winner.

What has happened in the first year after the war? Except in the way of record attendances and general enthusiasm, the aftermath of World War II hasn't even approached the aftermath of World War I. Not in the way of competitive class.

Can you name competitors today who have anything like the combined class of Babe Ruth, Jack Dempsey, Bobby Jones, Bill Tilden, Tommy Hitchcock, Rogers Hornsby, Earl Sande, Walter Hagen, Gene Sarazen, Red Grange, Man of War? We have Joe Louis. But Joe Louis has been the world's heavyweight champion for over nine years.

We have Ted Williams, but Ted Williams hit over .400 before the last war. He was a great ball player, or at least a great hitter, before World War II ever developed a slight fever. Sammy Baugh and Sid Luckman go well back before World War II.

The brief postwar period has developed a wild stampede to the box office. But very little beyond that. In baseball the batting stars today include Ted Williams, Dixie Walker, Dom DiMaggio, Vernon, Musial, Hank Greenberg and a few more. But these are veterans—most of them. Hal Newhouse of the Tigers and Rocky Graziano have been the two leading stars since 1941.

Against this list I haven't the heart to give you the names of those who have faded, folded up or slipped badly—who, returning from army and navy assignments, fell far behind. The outstanding performance of 1946—so far—has been the Red Sox, plus Ted Williams. Plus the Dodgers' fine showing against heavy odds, player for player. The second nomination is Joe Louis—who against Billy Conn had almost no opposition.

Ben Hogan and Byron Nelson are the two major money winners in golf—but Lloyd Mangrum is Open champion and Herman Keiser is the Master's winner. And Sammy Sneed is British champion. It is all very much confused, very badly tangled up.

Most Class in Football

In my opinion the feature part of 1946 won't belong to baseball, racing, boxing, basketball, track, golf or tennis. It will belong to football. This applies to both the college teams and the pros. This first applies to the quality of competition. There will be far more class to football than any other postwar sport can even approach.

I understand that over 100,000 applications had been made for the Army-Michigan game back in June. There will be over 200,000 ticket applications for this contest at Ann Arbor. Applications for the Army-Notre Dame game will pass the 300,000 mark before September. Army-Notre Dame and Army-Navy together could leave the 500,000 mark behind — if there was only space enough.

The Navy-Georgia Tech game in Atlanta already has two times the seat applications that Atlanta can handle. Notre Dame, Army, Navy and Michigan will be a triple sell-out for almost every contest. The same thing will happen to Southern California and UCLA on the west coast. Also to St. Mary's and others.

But I doubt that Notre Dame will have the team Frank Leahy had in 1943 or that Army will have the team Red Blaik had in 1944 or 1945. The talent hasn't improved, but the crowd interest has. Veterans coming from army and navy service have proved nothing. Some have been better — others have taken a big dip. This has been true in baseball — and it will be just as true in college and pro football.

There will be stars from other years who will shine — and there will be stars from other years who will be flops.

There will be a professional football entanglement that will leave you gasping—and more than a few pocketbooks flatter than a thin plank. In looking on ahead you will also see a big revival in tennis interest — and one of the hottest amateur golf championships any galloping member of the Thundering Herd has ever known. Bud Ward — Frank Stranahan — Cary Middlecoff — golfers good enough to beat the Nelsons and the Hogans in major tests, plus young stars moving up. This has been a rather lizzy season so far, up and down.

Kidneys Must Work Well—

For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at night, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulates the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

DOAN'S PILLS

TREASURE OF THE SEA

BY George E. Walsh

W.N.U. Release

THE STORY THUS FAR:

The crew of a small sailing vessel in the Caribbean pick up Dick Jordan, adrift on a raft. Dick realizes he is among men who are virtually pirates. They come upon a drifting schooner. Only people aboard are demented Captain Bedford and his daughter, Rose. Tucu and his pirates attempt to capture the schooner, but Rose turns them back, aided by Dick. During the night Tucu again attacks and captures Rose and Dick. He then begins a fruitless search for the "treasure" supposed to be aboard. Dick talks him into a deal. Tucu is anxious to get the treasure and get away. Rose is startled when she hears Dick's bargain.

CHAPTER VI

"Don't be sorry until you know what you're sorry for," she interrupted sharply. "I didn't say there was anything of value aboard. What Father says I'm not responsible for. He says a lot of crazy things."

"Then—then—"

She waved him to silence as a footstep sounded on the stairs and Captain Tucu pushed his way into the room. He glanced from one prisoner to the other.

"Well," he growled, "y'ready to tell?"

"As much as we know, captain," replied Dick quickly. "Neither of us knows where Captain Bedford hid the money. If we had known we'd have left the schooner before you came aboard."

Rose Bedford turned to face the half-breed, her cheeks flushed and angry. There was no fear in her. "If you think I'd tell if I knew where it was hidden," she said defiantly, "you're mistaken. You could never get it out of me."

Her defiance brought the blood into the old pirate's face and the devil in his eyes. He stepped toward her and caught an arm in his powerful grip.

"Y'wouldn't!" he snarled. "Y'wouldn't, eh? Well, y'llittle she-devil, I'll show ye. I'll wring it out of ye, an—"

"Hold on, captain," interrupted Dick, "she doesn't know anything about it. Let up on her! You promised not to make war on her. Settle it with me."

"Well, what d'ye know about it?" was the savage retort, as he turned from the girl to him. "Y'tell me or y'll go back in the water where we found ye. Pretty damn quick, too!"

Dick was struggling between a strong desire to twist the man's neck and the need of extra caution in playing his hand skillfully. The latter finally triumphed. He smiled good-naturedly.

"If you dropped me overboard, captain, you'd lose both treasure and those jewels. Now you don't want to do that."

Tucu growled impotently, expending his wrath by glancing from one to the other with wicked, malevolent eyes. He spat viciously on the floor, and then exploded:

"I'll give y'until tonight—sundown—to find out. If we ain't got the stuff by that time, y'got to find it for us—ye an' that witch! Y'get me? It's got to be found! I don't care how y'do it, so's it's done. If not we'll string the capt'n up by his thumbs 'til he remembers, an' ye an' this girl'll come next. If we can't do any better we'll tie y'up in the cabin an' set the schooner afire. Then ye an' the treasure can go to hell together."

"And the smuggled jewels?" queried Dick, smiling.

Captain Tucu regarded him an instant in silence, and then shook his head. "I ain't sure there ever was any jewels," he said suspiciously. "I may give y'one more chance to prove it. Then—then—ye'll wish y'd died on that raft. It would be much easier, I reckon, than the way ye'll go if y'disappoint me."

Tucu Is Convinced There Is No Treasure

As the search proceeded, and nothing was found, the half-breed's temper grew short and surly. He kept the deck most of the time, his eyes on Dick, who was lashed to the foremast, or on Rose. Captain Bedford had been held a prisoner in the fo'c's'le where he had been subjected to certain third-degree methods of Tucu's invention; but the wandering mind of the demented man was a treacherous thing to depend upon.

In time the old man's very willingness to talk of the hidden treasure disgusted them.

"Hell," muttered Tucu in disgust: "He never had no treasure."

He strode on deck, his eyes blood-shot with anger. Seizing Rose by the arm, he said: "Y've been lyin' ter me. There wasn't no treasure aboard."

"I never said there was," she replied coolly. "You took Father's word for it, and I told you he wasn't responsible for what he said."

Tucu glared at her in silence, his face working in a passion. Then without a word, he dropped her arm and strode toward Dick. "Y'got one more chance," he said ominously. "Y'llied 'bout this treasure. Now we'll see if y'were lyin' 'bout them jewels."

"What's wrong, captain?" asked Dick, realizing that something had happened to bring matters to a head. "There ain't no treasure aboard. Y'made up that tale. Now we'll see if y'made up that one 'bout the smuggled gems."

Matters had certainly reached a climax. The crew under Tucu's orders were preparing to return to the lugger. Dick didn't quite understand what it meant until half an hour later two Caribs cut the ropes holding him to the mast. He tried to extract from them some information; but they mutely disregarded him and conducted him to the small boat.

Ten minutes later he was rowed back to the lugger. All except two of the crew were abandoning the schooner. When Tucu and Black Burley came aboard the lugger, Dick's fear for his own safety was secondary to his dread that something terrible was about to happen to Rose.

"Where's Captain Bedford's daughter?" he demanded sharply.

"Where she wanted to be—aboard the schooner," replied Tucu, grinning.

"She's not going with us?"

"No."

"Is she alone?"

"Y've been lyin' to me."

"She's got two o' my men to keep her company, an' that crazy father," leered the half-breed.

Dick frowned. The sea was rough and choppy, and the wind blowing half a gale. The threatened storm was rapidly approaching. The schooner was in no condition to weather it. Captain Bedford was worse than useless, and the Caribs were indifferent seamen.

"Storm's coming, captain," Dick said finally, "and the schooner will go down in it. Why not take the captain and his daughter off? You don't want them to drown?"

"The hell I don't," snapped the other. "I didn't put 'em there, an' I ain't goin' to take 'em off."

"Then will you let me go back to them?"

Tucu grinned. "Y're goin' to show me where them smuggled goods was chucked off the steamer, or y're goin' to feed the fishes."

The man's plan was clear enough now. Convinced there was nothing of great value aboard the schooner, he had abandoned her until after he had found the smuggled gems. Later, if the storm did not send the schooner to the bottom, he could return and salvage her if she was worth it.

The gale was stiffening every minute, and the work of getting under way was hurried. With almost bare poles the lugger would have great difficulty in standing up in the wind and rough sea. A giant wave swept the deck. With a yell Dick tried to save himself, but with his arms tied behind his back he was as helpless as a child. He rolled over and over, and was saved at the last minute by Black Burley, who jerked him back in the nick of time.

Once Again Dick Plunges Into Sea

"Cut these ropes," Dick spluttered, "and give me a chance. Another wave like that will finish me."

Captain Tucu nodded to his mate. "Cut 'em an' take him below."

Dick waited his chance. He had definitely decided to trust his life to the sea again and to try to reach the schooner. Better die battling with the elements than sail away with the black pirates. He stood a moment, stretching his limbs, and watching the heaving seas. Another wave, smaller than the first, but big enough to give him an excuse, swept over the bow of the lugger and rolled aft.

When it struck him, he gave another yell, as if calling for help, but instead of resisting the mass of green waters he plunged straight into them and assisted them in carrying him overboard. Black Burley made a grab for him with his long arms, but Dick ducked in time to elude them.

Shaking the brine out of his eyes, he began swimming, holding his head as high out of the water as he could. He made no resistance to the waves, but swam with them, striving to keep on their crests for better observation. A light twinkled out of the darkness, but he wasn't sure whether it came from the lugger or the schooner.

He conserved his strength as much as possible, swimming easily and treading water every time he was swept on the crest of a wave. From this pinnacle he had a wide glimpse of the sea; but the darkness now shut out everything, and neither the lugger nor the schooner was visible.

"I've missed it," he groaned once. "I should have been there before this."

In the midst of his bitter reflections his hand caught something that startled him.

It was a water-soaked rope!

His mind nimbly leaped from despair to hope. He clutched eagerly at the mass of slimy ropes that before had been sea monsters and slippery eels. Now they were life lines flung out to help him. Their continued lashing and twisting were pleasant indications that they were real and substantial. He was not dreaming.

He began clawing at them, pulling himself from one mass of rigging to another. When his hands came in contact with a floating spar, and it bobbed up and nearly smashed his face, he laughed in glee instead of cursing. If he could crawl up the wreckage to the schooner's deck he would be safe.

Finally a giant wave carried him clear over the rail and dropped him heavily on the deck where he lay sprawled for some moments, gasping for breath, and groaning from the effects of the terrific struggle. The crests of the surging waves reached him even here, but they no longer had the power to use him as a battering ram.

When he finally raised his head and looked around the wave-swept deck, he had a queer feeling that all his efforts had been in vain. The schooner was abandoned, with him as the only living being aboard.

A little startled by his discovery, he began crawling in the direction of the cabin. If Rose and her father were aboard he would find them there, for the wet, slippery deck was no place for them, and they could not hope to navigate the derelict on such a wild night.

When he reached the head of the companion, a welcome ray of light came through the open door of the cabin, bringing joy and relief to his tortured mind. Rose was below with her father, watching, hoping, and praying or stoically awaiting their fate.

Dick staggered to his feet and started down the steps; but before he had taken one, sounds of a muffled commotion halted him. Craning his head forward, he listened, peering intently through the murky gloom until his eyes came to a focus on something lying half across the threshold. With a little start of surprise, he recognized the body of one of the two Caribs left behind on the schooner.

Another Ugly Battle For Rose and Dick

A reddish clot of blood in the middle of the forehead told where a bullet had entered and brought his life to a sudden end.

From inside the cabin came the low, shifting sounds of a wordless conflict, with the combatants struggling back and forth in a deadly embrace, their breath coming in short, wheezy gasps.

Dick slipped down the few steps and stood astride the dead Carib. He blinked a moment under the strong light of the swinging cabin lamp before he took in the significance of the scene.

The second Carib had disarmed Rose, and with one powerful hand pinning her against the wall he was trying to encircle her waist with his free arm. With a growl of rage, Dick sprang at the brute, catching him by the neck, and with a jerk wrenched his head back. Then looping an arm around the neck he pried the head backward until he could get a strangle hold on the windpipe.

The Carib was a big, powerful man, with a head as hard as a battering ram, and arms and legs as thick and solid as tree trunks. After the first shock of surprise, he struggled to shake his assailant from his back, grunting and blowing loudly. Dick's strength had been badly spent in the struggle in the water, and as they rolled and twisted over the cabin floor his own breath came in short, labored gasps.

In spite of his advantageous hold, he realized that the Carib might eventually get the better of him. The bull-like neck rose and fell, emitting horrible gurgling sounds, but his strength showed no signs of weakening. The powerful muscles were working slowly and steadily, while Dick's were rapidly weakening under the strain.

Then, when it seemed as if his last ounce of strength had been used up, and his burly antagonist was still fresh and active, a sudden deafening crash shattered the stillness.

Clean Milk Comes From Modern Barns

Well Constructed and Clean Mangers Urged

Concrete dairy barn floors and mangers will prove a big help in producing milk of high quality as well as reducing the amount of labor required. The U. S. public health service milk code provides that no dairy barn meets the requirements for producing high grade milk without a long-lasting, non-absorbent, sanitary floor such as concrete.

Forms are made of one-inch lumber, well braced. Concrete for the floor is made with five gallons of water per sack of portland cement when sand and gravel are moist. The mix should be plastic and workable, but not too sloppy nor too stiff.

Barn floors and mangers properly designed and built help assure clean, comfortable, healthy stock—high quality milk.

Build the manger curb first; then the litter alley and the manger. Leave holes in concrete for future stall equipment if not now available. Then build stall platforms. These will vary according to the kind of cattle. The mangers should be finished with a steel trowel. The concrete should be damp cured for at least five days before using.

Know Your Breed Guernsey

By W. J. DRYDEN

Valleywood Valiant Hero 235690, a grand champion Guernsey bull of registered performance.

The Guernsey breed originated on the small English channel island of Guernsey. The breed was brought to America as early as 1818.

The Guernsey is of medium size with fawn and white clearly delineated markings. Summary of 98,297 advanced registered records show the average production was 10,151 pounds of milk and 498 pounds butterfat. Some 53 animals produced over 1,000 pounds butterfat and 14 have lifetime records of over 100,000 pounds of milk.

Feeding Molasses to Salt Grass for Cows

Good stuff, the salt grass, Here-fords say after they've sampled it. Photo—Food Mach. Corp.

Salt grass which cattle ordinarily will not eat may be covered with a solution of one-third water and two-thirds molasses. Power spray may be used economically with a 20-foot width.

Cattle fatten on the molasses and water combined with the grass, produce bigger and tastier steaks. Other similar uses may be devised for use of power sprays to meet individual requirements.

Weed Killer Shortens Farm Crop Maturity

Experiments in Hawaii and Puerto Rico with 2,4-D—miracle weed killer, indicate that it may control the growth of pineapples two years instead of three. It is generally believed that further experiments will prove that 2,4-D will shorten the time of maturity for many crops in America. Earlier maturing tomatoes, melons, corn, yams, potatoes and other farm crops are among those being experimented with.

JESUS AND PURE LIVING

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:14; Proverbs 4:14-23; Matthew 5:8; Philippians 4:8.
MEMORY SELECTION—Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life.—Proverbs 4:23.

Moral corruption has been the ruin of the great nations of the earth, and if history is not to be repeated by the fall of our own nation, we must do something—yes, something prompt and drastic. The breakdown of morals in our land is so evident and so widespread as to give grave concern to social and national leaders. What then, is the Church doing about it?

We do not like to talk about adultery and related sins. We must speak with care and tact, but perhaps the time has come for some straightforward dealing with an unpleasant situation.

I. Keep Your Home Pure (Exod. 20:14).

As the divinely appointed center of man's life, the home holds a place of such importance that it is the special target of Satan's offensive. That has always been true, but it seems that in recent years the onslaught against the home has been intensified.

Any violation of the divine plan for the marriage of one man and one woman in loving communion for the founding and maintenance of the home, is a direct violation of the law of God.

It is also a violation of the law of man. It brings serious results in the destruction of the home, and in the ruin of individual life—physical, moral and spiritual.

This awful sin (and do not let a wicked world convince you that it is anything else) is back of much of the discord and divorce in our American homes.

When we realize that in the City of Chicago there is now one divorce for every three marriages, and that the ratio is rapidly becoming lower, there can be no question that divorce is a major evil in our day. Statistics are positively shocking, but they are cold and quickly forgotten. But who can fail to see, and who can forget, the awful work brought into American home life by divorce.

Bad as it is, the awful effect on parents is nothing compared to the nervous, moral and spiritual shock which comes to children in broken homes. Statistics reveal that now (1946) more than 70 per cent of the juvenile delinquents and young people committed to prison come from homes where divorce has entered to break down and destroy family life.

II. Keep Your Heart Pure (Prov. 4:14-23; Matt. 5:8).

Out of the heart are the issues of life (Prov. 4:23); hence it is of the utmost importance that it be kept in purity and devotion to God.

The heart in Scripture does not refer to the physical organ which circulates the blood, but even as that heart is the center of the physical life, so there is a spiritual heart which is the very center of man's inner being.

Evil thoughts, unholy desires and ambitions hidden in the heart will ultimately be revealed in overt acts of ungodliness, unless God is permitted to regenerate that heart and make it clean.

The solution for the problem of impurity is found in our lesson verses. First of all one must avoid the way of the wicked (Prov. 4:14-17). They are so evil that they cannot sleep until they have misled some poor souls and brought them down to their own level (v. 16). They make sin and immorality look mysterious and attractive. Don't be led into sin by the enticement of curiosity.

Shun the evil way, which goes down with increasing darkness, by seeking the good way which "shineth more and more unto the perfect day" (Prov. 4:18, 19). The way of life is a bright and shining way. Don't let Satan fool you, young people, into thinking the opposite. It's great to be a Christian!

III. Keep Your Head Pure (Phil. 4:8).

The mind of man is quick and active (that is, if he is really alive and awake), and it wants to be occupied with something of interest. The world, the flesh and the devil are keenly aware of that fact and come to fill his mind with allurements to sin and destruction.

Thank God that no one need lack for things that are good, honorable, true and noble to fill and satisfy every mental as well as spiritual interest. God's provision is not limited either in scope or variety. He provides the best, the most delightful, the loveliest and most noble.

Observe that it is for us who know Christ as our Saviour to give ourselves in diligent effort to "think on these things." As we do we shall find that they crowd out our thinking those things which are sensual, selfish or sinful. It is a sound principle of psychology as well as a spiritual admonition. It really works.

Waterspouts Vary Greatly In Duration, Action, Size

Although as many as 30 waterspouts have been sighted from a single vessel in one day, most people and even many old seamen have never seen one of these columns of cloud-filled wind which rotate rapidly between a cloud and the surface of a body of water, says Collier's. They vary tremendously in duration, behavior and size.

One seen off New South Wales in 1898 was 10 feet in diameter but 5,000 feet in height; while another seen off California in 1914 was 700 feet in diameter but only 100 feet in height.

Keep Knives Sharp
 Sharpen hollow-ground kitchen knives by resetting their edges. Do this by stroking the blade at a 20-degree angle with a fine-grained oil stone. For best results in resetting the edge, use light, firm strokes made at right angles to the edge of the knife — the kind of strokes men use in shaving.

Next to be manufactured was a one-man portable power-saw, called the 'New Lowther C-Saw'. It is revolutionizing the timber business, as one man can fell more than 400 trees a day, 8 to 16 inches in size, and cuts 10 to 20 cords of pulp wood a day on three gallons of gasoline. Not only does the Lowther C-Saw cut timber, but clears swamp lands, dense brush and stumps, to make roads into new sections thru clearing the land. The C-Saw cuts at any angle, affording accessibility to hard to get at places.

Right now The Vertex Clutch Co. is manufacturing a new tool, A Tire Breaker, which is proving a great blessing for those who have to remove tires from tractors etc., after they have been rusted on the rim.

All these are being manufactured in Mokena at the Vertex Clutch Company located on Wolf Road. We welcome this new business establishment to our village and hope they will enjoy much prosperity.

New Labor Saving Tools Manufactured In Mokena

The Vertex Clutch Company, located in the former Heusner Garage building, on Wolf Road, which they purchased, opened for business there in January of this year. They employ twenty men from Mokena and New Lenox.

Mr. Les Brownlee of New Lenox, a designer, and who has many patents on his designs, is the foreman of the company.

At first, various kinds of clutches were manufactured, but when materials became scarce, clutch making was stopped.

Fine Health Exhibit At County Fair

One of the most interesting features to be found among the numerous displays at the County Fair in Peotone, will be the exhibit presented by the Will County Health Department. This exhibit will be housed in a tent and will be easily accessible to all interested in public health.

Of special interest to the rural patrons of the fair will be the "School House Percentage" posters—two large posters on which are fixed dozens of paper school houses representing the various school districts throughout the county. Each school house is named for a school, and with the name of the school is listed the percentage of enrollment protected by immunization against diphtheria and smallpox. Few and far between are the schools that rank 100%, but proudly bearing the 100% sign against diphtheria are Caton Farm School, Rose Hill, Hykes Grove, Spencer, Marley, Hansen, Piepenbrink; Records for protection by 100% immunization against smallpox are held by Caton Farm school, Hykes Grove, Troutman Grove, Spencer, Marley, Hansen, Deutsche, and Scheiwe. Much credit is due the Public Health Nurses and the teachers in these schools for building up interest of pupils and their parents in this important part of the public health program.

Closely connected with the work of the Health Department is the demonstration of Home Pasteurization of Milk to be given by the Will County Nutrition committee and Will County Chapter of American Red Cross. This protection of milk, a most important food, is typical of the fight against Undulant Fever, a disease which has been widespread through Will County in the past few years. This demonstration may be seen each day of the fair, if you visit the Pavilion at the hours of 11:00, 2:00, 5:00, 6:00 or 7:00.

A demonstration of safe water supplies also may be seen displayed by the State Department of Public Health Division of Sanitary Engineering. Models of two properly constructed wells, presented in cross-section, will be on exhibition. This will be of special interest to all who must depend on a private water supply, and who wish to assure their families of safe water supply.

Probably the most interesting section of the County Health Department's extensive display will be the diet study which has been featured in various Will County schools for the past two years. This experiment is based on the feeding of two young white rats, PEP-PEY and POKEY, general favorite among the youngsters. Usually carried on at an experimental laboratory, this simple experiment has been made by grade school children of Will County to show how food affects the human body, since the digestive system of a rat is very similar to that of a human. Eight children from the Peotone Grade schools have been chosen to care for this demonstration: Lois Mathews, Betty Smith, Francis Schroeder, Vernon Miller, Leanne Krapf, Verna Nickel, Alice Sonet, and Carol Gall. These children will be in charge of the Pokey Peppy exhibit, working in shifts, caring for the rats, weighing the animals, weighing and measuring their food, recording the results, and presenting to visitors at the fair the general discussion of diet—why Peppy is larger, and his coat is so smooth and white—why Pokey is nervous and irritable and doesn't manage his feet and legs very well, and how all this applies directly to the lives of the pupils themselves.

Also, a number of large, beautifully made, easy-to-read posters showing various other phases of the Public Health work will be arranged about the exhibit.

Visit the well-planned and interesting exhibit of the Will County Health Department at the Peotone Fair—your intelligent inspection will yield you an interesting and instructive afternoon.

The Post Office Department has recently issued the following information:

Air Mail service to Germany will be begun August 28 with letters and post cards only being accepted. The rate will be 30c ½ oz.

Domestic air mail is to be reduced effective October 1, to 5c.

National Air Mail week will be observed October 27 to November 2.

On August 12, ordinary gift parcels to the British Zone of Germany, not exceeding 11 lbs., are acceptable for mailing also to parts of Germany now Polish controlled. The rates and weights will be the same as effective for Poland.

The Polish controlled territory of Germany is defined as follows:

1. Portions of Pomerania, Brandenburg, and Silesia located to the east of a line starting from the Baltic Sea immediately west of Swinemunde, following the Oder River southward to its confluence with the Neisse River, and thence following the Neisse River southward to the Czechoslovak frontier.

2. The portion of East Prussia located to the south of a line passing north of but close to Braunsberg, south of Preussisch Eylau, north of Gerdauen, north of Angerapp, and south of Ebrenrode.

Government Spending And Your Dollar

Of all the issues which will face the next Congress, none will be more important than that of a balanced budget. Continued deficit spending, with the war over and the country undergoing a boom period, is the greatest threat to the value of the dollar, the savings of the people, and the future stability of the nation.

In depression times, the advocates of free spending enthusiastically backed the John Maynard Keynes theory, which, to put it simply, is that government must go in the red and prime the pump when conditions are bad. Now the same group seems to have forgotten the logical development of that theory—which is that in good times government must retrench, spend less than it receives, and build up some economic fat for lean years to come.

A sound fiscal policy now must have three progressive phases. First, the budget must be balanced. Second, there must be an orderly program for reducing and eventually liquidating the public debt. Third, when sufficient progress has been made along the first two phases, taxes on industry and individuals must be gradually reduced.

This is a long-term program. Its results will only be apparent over decades. But it must be the backbone of any fiscal policy which will spare us from government-induced inflation, the destruction of insurance values, the collapse of the currency, and the kind of general economic collapse we are witnessing in Central Europe, China and elsewhere.

Hanging Table Cloths
Fold freshly washed table cloths selvage to selvage, putting the selvage edges over the line with plenty of clothes pins, and you'll find they are much easier to iron.

Preheat Stuffing
Try heating the stuffing in a pan before it is put into a chicken, duck or turkey. You'll find it cuts the roasting time.

Unmarketable Material
Around 200 million tons of unmarketable farm material are produced annually. Industry expects to convert much of this into usable products.

Candy Ingredients
Ingredients used in making an average one-pound assortment of American candy come from as many as 29 countries. The "English" walnuts are grown in France.

Build Meal Around Cheese
You can build a whole meal around cheese or you can use it in small quantities for that extra touch on many dishes from soup to dessert. Remember that it is rich in protein, calcium and riboflavin of the vitamin B family.

Flour Milling
Kansas ranks first among all states in flour milling.

FARM TELEPHONES ARE GOING IN FAST

Despite serious material shortages, we're making good strides on our $3,000,000 rural telephone program.

Service was installed last year for 3,000 additional rural families. This year, we are busy building hundreds of miles of new rural telephone lines. And hundreds of men—many of them returned war veterans—have completed intensive training courses and are hard at work on this rural job.

Our 1946 goal is 9,000 more telephones in rural areas—and even better service for our present customers.

minated that the cost might rise to $565,000,000. By comparison, all farm real-estate taxes paid in 1940 totaled only $400,000,000.

This plan would be financed, in part, by taxing the farmers' income. A farmer with an income of $2,000 a year, for instance, would pay $100. Further he would be liable for a 4 percent payroll tax if he hired any help. Lastly it is estimated that even this revenue would be insufficient and the government would have to make up the deficit from other sources of income—which means eventual higher taxes on everyone, farmers included.

As the Country Gentleman concludes, "It seems that such a vast and complicated affair calls for more study before any action is taken." The rural health problem, which is at the core of the Wagner-Murray-Dingell Bill, can be solved without establishing government dictatorship of medicine. All of us are sympathetic with the motives behind such measures. But many thoughtful people are extremely dubious of the soundness of the method proposed.

"I'M A SWITCHMAN IN A RAILROAD YARD"

"My job is shunting cars in a busy Northern Illinois rail yard, a part of the world's greatest transportation center. Every day I see rolling stock from practically every railroad in the country. When it comes to loading and unloading cars, I know there's no faster service in the world. They tell me there's more track in the Chicago industrial area alone than there is main line mileage in 39 of the 48 states, and I can easily believe it.

"It's to my advantage to work at the heart of this country's transportation industry. My home is in Northern Illinois and my family and I enjoy living here because of fine churches, museums, libraries and sport facilities."

This switchman is one of many thousands employed in transportation in Northern Illinois... the greatest transportation center in the world.

Chicago and Northern Illinois is served by 22 trunk lines and 17 belt and terminal railroads... Nine principal air lines connect Chicago by air with every major city in North America, England and Europe: ... Over 600 truck and bus lines speed products, parts and people to 24,000 United States communities... There are 10,000 miles of inland waterways serving Chicago and Northern Illinois. Transatlantic vessels may come to Lake Michigan ports direct via the St. Lawrence, and the Illinois deep waterway provides a direct link with the Gulf of Mexico.

Transportation is only one of the many advantages available to industry and business in Chicago and Northern Illinois. As an aid to others considering location here, the staff of trained industrial engineers in our Territorial Information Department is available to supply factual data concerning this area. These studies will be prepared in as great detail as is required, confidentially and without charge.

Industries locating in this area have these outstanding advantages: Railroad Center of the United States • World Airport • Inland Waterways • Geographical Center of U. S. Population • Great Financial Center • The "Great Central Market" • Food Producing and Processing Center • Leader in Iron and Steel Manufacturing • Good Labor Relations Record • 2,500,000 Kilowatts of Power • Tremendous Coal Reserves • Good Government • Good Living • Good Services for Tax Dollars • Send for free booklets containing useful information on these advantages.

New Bong Stories Related On Anniversary of Death

By WNU Features.

On the first anniversary of the untimely death of Maj. Richard I. Bong of Poplar, Wis., America's ace of aces, many interesting facts concerning the modest farm youth who skyrocketed to fame in the armed service of his country are revealed for the first time by the memorial foundation bearing his name.

The admiration and respect for the air hero who shot down 40 Japanese planes, held by his friends and neighbors in the tiny village of Poplar in northwestern Wisconsin, is indicative of the personality and character traits of Bong the man.

Shunned Limelight.

Bong never considered himself a famous personage. He never thought he was a hero and he consistently refused to accept the plaudits of the crowd. Inherently shy and overly modest, he shunned attempts of friends to place him in the limelight.

It is a matter of record that he usually tried to pass the glory on to others — to his ground crew, his flightmates and even to parents of all servicemen. It was his statement that "the real heroes of this war are the parents who sit and wait at home and suffer the real tortures."

Although Bong in early childhood showed keen interest in aeronautics and flying, it is doubtful that he ever thought he would realize an ambition to pilot a plane. He would gaze longingly at planes that passed over his father's farm, dreaming in awe at the miracle of flight.

Planned to Teach.

Of modest circumstances, he looked forward to a teaching career in his native state. To this end he was enrolled at Superior State Teachers college in Superior, Wis., during the days that fate was sweeping America towards war.

By May of 1941 Dick had entered the army. In November he was accepted as an air cadet. That Bong was an apt pupil and skillful in the handling of airplanes was indicated soon after his training started. In January, 1942, he was made an instructor at Luke Field. In September of that same year he was on his way to the Pacific theater, where he accomplished the deeds now so well known to the world.

'Probables' Unrecorded.

Other airmen, hailing his record of "kills," have stated that Bong shot down at least 9 or 10 more planes than he was credited with, but that because of his rather unorthodox methods of air-fighting, these never were recorded officially. He had a habit of trailing his enemy to doom and consequently no witnesses were on hand to verify these probables.

Of further interest is the observation that the majority of Bong's missions were accomplished at long range; he flew hundreds of miles most of the time before encountering actual combat. Even so, he managed to outscore all pilots, not only in the Pacific area but also on the European front.

His success and skill no doubt were accounted for by his accurate "eye." It was an accepted fact that Dick's eyesight was most unusual, for he could sight an enemy plane quicker than anyone else in his squadron. Once he got on the trail of a Zero, it was almost certain death for his foe, for he rarely missed.

Around his home town of Poplar friends will tell you even today that Bong had a real hunter's instinct. His mother has said that Dick observed things in the dark that others would miss. She tells of his tramps into the woods, gun in hand and a faithful dog at his heels. The Bong family still retains Dick's favorite hunters.

Establishes Record.

On July 23, 1943, he became America's leading ace of World War II when he added four victims to his string. His total was 15 and he rapidly was approaching the mark set in World War I by Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker. He had engaged in his 25th operational flight.

In August, 1943, he was promoted to the rank of captain and in October he received the Distinguished Service Cross from General MacArthur for heroism over New Guinea's Markham valley on a mission flown July 26.

Bong passed Captain Rickenbacker's record of 26 planes on April 13, 1944, when he shot down his 26th and 27th enemy planes. In April, 1944, Bong was promoted to major and a short time later he was presented with the Congressional Medal of Honor by General MacArthur on Leyte island.

Test Flight Fatal.

Major Bong scored his 40th Jap plane in December, 1944, and not long afterwards he was ordered back to the United States for special duty. He was made a test pilot and it was while flying an army jet-propelled fighter that the accident occurred which cost his life on August 6, 1945. Two days later he was buried in the quiet little country cemetery at Poplar.

The foundation bearing Dick Bong's name was organized by men and women from all walks of life. Its objective is to perpetuate the memory of deeds of all American airmen of World War II, as symbolized in the valor of Major Bong. This it proposes to do through awarding engineering scholarships to high school graduates and through erection of a shrine at Poplar.

HARDY ANIMALS . . . In an attempt to fill the need felt by cattlemen in cold regions of North America for a breed of beef cattle which would weather sub-zero conditions, A. S. MacLellan, dominion herdsman at Wainwright, Alta., Canada, started crossing male beef cattle with buffalo cows 25 years ago. The result was "Cattalo." Today the Cattalo looks more like a domestic animal than a buffalo although it has inherited the latter's robust qualities and size. In weather which would freeze cattle, the Cattalo survives. After the third generation the buffalo hump has been bred out, reproduction bred in, so crossbreeding was dropped. Quality of the beef is equal to that of the Aberdeen Angus, Shorthorn and Hereford.

Many Texans Will 'Walk Themselves to Death'

AUSTIN, TEXAS.—Approximately 360 Texans will "walk themselves to death" this year, Texas Safety association predicts.

Most of the victims will walk with the traffic and will come from behind parked cars to be struck down, the association reports on the basis of a study of fatal accidents. Other pedestrians will meet death while crossing at intersections against the signal and while crossing diagonally across the street. Pedestrian fatalities increase around the hour of sunset in all seasons of the year, the survey shows, with the greatest number of mishaps between 7 p. m. and 8 p. m. during the summer months. The Saturday and Sunday toll constitutes approximately 50 per cent of the total pedestrian accidents.

The survey covers fatalities during the first six months of the year.

C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Mental Illness Clinics

In addition to 32 clinics already authorized, the Veterans' administration has directed the establishment of as many such clinics as necessary in the 70 regional offices for the treatment of mental illnesses among war veterans.

According to the announcement, the need for treatment of these emotional and nervous diseases is evident and experience in civilian practice both before and during the war indicates that a majority of such cases can be treated in clinics without hospitalization.

In the mental hygiene program, emphasis will be placed on group therapy which is the simultaneous treatment of a number of veterans suffering from similar mental or emotional disturbances. The neuropsychiatrist, clinical psychologist and social worker will co-operate as a team in these clinics in treating the patient.

Questions and Answers

Q. Can my daughter, who is engaged to a young fellow overseas, book passage on a boat and be married to him while he is still in service in Germany?—S. P., Havre de Grace, Md.

A. The war department says the procedure is for the girl to write the boy telling him to get permission from the commanding general, European theatre, for entrance of the girl into the area for the purpose of his marriage. When he receives this letter of permission from the commanding general, he should mail it to the girl. She will then take the letter along with passport application to the state department and apply for passport and visa to get overseas. She then must arrange for her passage and pay her own way.

Q. My husband was in the army three years, from 1905 to 1908, and was in the Ute Indian campaign. Would he be entitled to a pension? He is not disabled from military service.—Mrs. R. F. J., Mahtowa, Minn.

A. There is provision for both disability and death pensions for Indian wars. I am not sure, however, whether these provisions apply to the period 1905 to 1908. They apparently apply to earlier Indian wars. However, to be sure, you should take it up with your nearest Veterans' administration office.

Q. I am a World War II veteran and would like to start farming. I kept hearing over the radio that I could get a loan from the banks under the G.I. bill of rights. Well, I went to the bank and they said I had to have capital to get a loan but how can I have that when I served three years in the army? Is there any chance of me getting a loan so that I could start farming?—R. L. K., Winslow, Ill.

A. Provisions of this law are that the Veterans' administration will approve a loan up to $4,000 for an eligible veteran, if the lending institution will make the loan. The bank or other lender is the judge of whether or not the veteran is a good risk and is likely to succeed in his venture.

Q. My son was discharged from the army in February, 1946. He was overseas 25 months and while in the army he had to work so hard he could not rest at night and would wander around in his sleep. Since he is at home the same thing happens when he works hard. He can't get any rest at night. He wasn't this way until he went into the army. Would it be possible that he is eligible for a disability pay?—Mrs. J. L. E., Hickory Flat, Miss.

A. It might be possible. The only way to find out is for your son to apply to your nearest office of the Veterans' administration and ask for an examination and disability rating.

Q. My son was killed in action in World War II. His insurance was made by his mother. We are divorced. I am 55 years old and not able to work. Can I draw a dependent parent's pension? If so, how much and where shall I apply?—D. V. M., Ferguson, W. Va.

A. Yes, although divorced, as a dependent father you should be entitled to $25 per month. Make application to the Veterans' administration office at Huntington.

Q. My husband is a veteran of World War I, serving overseas 11 months. He has a 50 per cent permanent disability given in 1930. This disability becomes worse. Is he eligible for pension? If so, where can he get help?—Mrs. M. L., Fort Payne, Ala.

A. Your husband evidently had a disability rating from the Veterans' administration which likely was wiped out by the economy act of 1933. Suggest that he contact his nearest office of the Veterans' administration for a new disability rating.

Evaluating 'Morale'

We have been looking into army and navy "E" awards. . . . Even if all the thousands of them were meritorious — which is an absurd hypothesis — this system adds up to a $100,000,000 scandal. Based on a theory that such hooey boosted the workers' morale, it cost probably 50,000,000 man hours in war-plants, 25,000 lost days for officers, diversion of transportation facilities and waste of gas, plus some of the highest-powered hangovers ever experienced by men in uniform.

Army-navy urged these plants to throw celebrations. Some turned into week-long drunks, with whiskey and champagne suppers, imported entertainers and party girls, arriving in private cars and chartered planes. All this was legally deductible for income tax purposes, chargeable against production costs and valid accounting in contract renegotiation.

Officers were assigned, often traveling hundreds and thousands of miles, taking several weeks on a job, all on government pay and travel and subsistence expenses. One public relations officer was always sent on ahead, to whip up the show. Higher ones came on later, to make stuffy speeches, ride in parades and souse up with the happy executives and their ladies.

There was usually a shutdown. All hands were guests at shows and blowouts, in hotels, country clubs, local theatres taken over. Besides, there were more exclusive to-dos for officers and corporation officials, "guardian angels" and other politicians, with costly souvenirs handed out — everything charged as legitimate expense.

PROs were briefed by higher officers to encourage as much hoopla as the plants could swing. Some of them did practically no other work. The signal corps, with only about a half-dozen HQ posts in the country, traveled its advance agents countless miles. Often the plants paid these men's expenses and those of higher officers, although the army did, too, doubling the cost to the taxpayer.

It was one of the sweetest rack-ets of the conflict to exterminate the enemy by good old Yankee horse-sense and can-do. A triumph of E-bombs!

The Hollywood gin rummy swindle was turned up by a cub reporter (Los Angeles Examiner) on his first assignment. The paper had a tip that Michael MacDougall, the sleuth who specializes in such things, was in town. . . . Baker Conrad was sent on this thin tip. . . . He ran into some members of a club he thought might be involved. They were talking out loud — spilling names and all — on the story the youngster wasn't even sure was cooking. . . . He got an earful and ran to a phone. . . . The first newsbreak said only that three sharpers had taken Hollywood big boys — no names mentioned. . . . An hour after the edition hit the street, three heavy winners had engaged a high-priced lawyer to "protect their interests."

The prisoner in the dark Gestapo dungeon in Berlin was tall, gaunt Rudolf Diels, founder of the Gestapo in the first turbulent days of the Nazi regime. Diels had said "no" to Adolf when the fuhrer ordered him to liquidate an old pal who had outlived his usefulness to the swastika-gang. Now, Rudolf sat in his cell, awaiting the hangman — by order of Hitler, who did not like people who dared to say "no."

Standing before Diels was medical-dripping Hermann Goering. "I order you to divorce my sister," growled Goering. "Get out of her life. We cannot have a man in our family hung!"

Diels, a cool character, shrugged his shoulders, told Goering where to go.

Circumstances — too long and involved to relate here — saved Diels from the hangman. Today, sitting in a villa in Nuernberg, he supplies the prosecution with valuable information against the major war criminals. Among his frequent visitors was Capt. Harry N. Sperber, chief German interpreter at the trials.

"Strange," mused Diels to Harry, a sardonic smile on his sallow, sabre-slashed face. "It looks as if — after all — dear Hermann will have a man in the family hung! . . . Himself!"

"Dark of the Moon" has gone home, to the Smoky mountains, where it was written, about its own people, by Howard Richardson and William Barney. . . . It was staged at the Community theatre, in Asheville, N. C. . . . That is 15 miles from where the authors found the ballad of Barbara Allen, theme of their play. . . . Viscount Lascelles, nephew of King George VI of England, has a play he wrote making the Broadway office rounds.

Heaven Knows

By EULALIE WEEKS

According to reports, Jack Marshall was a very fascinating person. Well, as far as Virginia was concerned, she didn't care a snap about this Jack person in particular. It was the principle of the thing. Virginia thought it unfair, just because she had been transferred from her home town to the Trust company here and consequently knew very few people, that she should be deprived of the opportunity of meeting eligible men like other girls her age.

"Oh, well," Virginia sighed to herself. "What's the difference?"

As she turned away from the window and started to cross the street, lost in thought, she didn't even see the car that rounded the corner. The driver slammed on the brakes but not before Virginia had stepped off the curb and been splashed from head to foot with dirty, slushy water. It was all she needed at the moment!

"I say, I am sorry! I . . ." Virginia interrupted the pleasant voice with her bitter recriminations. "Well, why don't you look where you're going. Now look at me!"

"I am looking!"

Had the man the nerve to joke? "I'm just a sight and it's your fault!"

"You are—but it's not all my fault." He was laughing at her—Virginia saw red!

"Oh, you—YOU imbecile! You—you . . ."

"Hey, stop. Now don't get any madder. I'll give you a lift home and then . . ."

"I'm just a sight and it's your fault!"

Virginia knew he was right. Assuming as much dignity as possible she accepted his invitation. In about two minutes she was at her rooming house. "I'm sorry I lost my temper—it was my own fault, really."

His laugh was exciting and Virginia didn't know when she had ever heard such a pleasing voice. "That's better—perhaps another time you'll drive under more pleasant circumstances?"

"Heaven knows; who can say?"

For many days following, Virginia watched for the man who had splashed her but there was no sign of him.

One day Mrs. Baker called and invited Virginia to a cocktail party on the following Friday and the same day she was asked to again fill in at the bridge club. As she expected, the conversation kept reverting to Jack Marshall every time one of the girls was dummy.

"It's too bad you haven't even met him, Virginia. He's really keen."

"She'll probably meet him at Mrs. Baker's Friday," Bessie said this with such an inflection in her voice that she might as well have added, "but what good will that do?"

Virginia was about the last to arrive at the cocktail party. Mrs. Baker was charming as she led her from group to group, introducing her with many flattering remarks. Suddenly she laughed.

"I want you to meet Jack Marshall but I'm afraid we'll have to use dynamite to break through that defense!" However, as soon as Mrs. Baker approached, Virginia's bridge partners moved to one side with deference.

Jack Marshall!

Mrs. Baker was only half through the introduction when Jack interrupted. "Mrs. Baker, we've met! Believe it or not, I've been looking for Miss Small for two weeks. The girls all gaped."

"Well, you'll take care of Virginia?" You know where the punch-bowl is!" Mrs. Baker said. A thrill shot through Virginia as Jack placed his hand on her arm. She knew the girls could hear every word and she was glad that Bessie, especially, was taking it all in.

"Anyone ever splash your evening gown? I'm depending on it being ready for the Charity Ball!"

Household Hints

Way to locate a tiny leak in a roof is go into the attic on a bright sunny day. Then no matter how small the hole, the light will show through.

A pair of tweezers is useful for plucking threads that have been caught in sewing-machine stitching.

For a good swinging-gate support, use an old wagon wheel buried and staked down so the hub is level with the ground. The gate is bolted to the axle, which is then placed in the hub.

Rub tin and iron utensils with unsalted fat and they're rust-proof for even a long period of rest.

A child's sprinkling can is very convenient for watering house plants.

Don't overcrowd the dishpan. Wash one pan at a time and you'll spare knobs and handles from useless dents and breakage.

Before repainting seal the wood with a coat of paint so that the oil in the putty will not be absorbed. Putty, if used over plain wood, may become dry and fall off.

Origin of Odors

In the manufacture of synthetic perfume materials, the odor of violet is derived from oil of lemon grass, lily of the valley from oil of citronella, carnation from oil of cloves, and jasmine and musk from coal tar.
